

Facebook report FDNWC AGM 2022

Unfortunately, I have not been posting on the Facebook account much over the year. However, I would always post about events and when the display cabinet would change.

Since the last AGM there were two posts that reached a lot of people. These were about:

- Book display in the Library's Reading Room showcasing the finalists for the New Zealand Awards for Children and Young Adults. Post on 4 August 2021. Reached nearly 1,100 people
- About the regular book display that is in the Library's Reading Room, which shows a selection of books from the National Children's Collection. This post was the first one I had posted in a while. Posted on 26 March 2022. Reached just over 1,200 people.

Other topics that I have posted about over the year is about the new Wikipedia page for the New Zealand School Journal, an article about why people believe Hairy Maclary is Scottish, obituaries and of course Kathryn's wonderful event earlier this year.

If you have any ideas for items that we could post on the Facebook page, for example articles relating to children's literature, book reviews, or events that we may have missed highlighting that would be of interest to people, please email them through to us, or send us a message on Facebook.
